GW MASTER PLAN REVIEW

In the early 1960's, a D.C. urban development board, the National Capital Planning Commission (NCPC), decided each D.C. university had to design a long-range program for expansion and growth reaching to the year 1990 and beyond.

Most schools, including GW, were lacking in such a comprehensive development program. As a result, the GW Master Plan evolved to fill this gap, and has since become one of the University's most controversial proposals.

The controversy centers around the belief held by many students, faculty and area residents that a tree-shaded, townhoused urban campus should be a priority of GW. They contend that developing highrise, stone structures destroys the human aspects of the university. Dissenters also charge architects of the Master Plan with a lack of imagination and creativity.

But whatever the basis for the argument, the Plan does exist and is now in operation. Four of the six buildings designated for the Plan's "Phase 1" are finished or under construction: the Thomas Edison Building, the Medical School and Himmelfarb Library, the parking garage, and the new general library.

A fifth structure, the activities building, is on the final drawing boards, and the new faculty office building is not far behind.

The GW Master Plan, despite its critics, is not a loosely-written or spur-of-the-moment program. According to Vice President and Treasurer Charles E. Diehl, GW "had to make a choice" in the early 60's whether "to remain as an urban campus and fight the apparent obstacles for development or move into Virginia or some place else."

GW President Lloyd H. Elliott said the original Plan was designed in 1963, after the approval of the Board of Trustees, by a Chicago-Washington based city planning firm, Perkins and Will. Elliott became president in 1965 and a year later Mills, Petticord and Mills (MP&M) designed a "90 million development plan" for GW.

The MP&M Plan called for the development of the 20-block area bounded by Pennsylvania Ave., and F, 19th, and 24th streets, the area designated by the NCPC for GW expansion. In 1969, according to Elliott, the University learned the International Monetary Fund (IMF) had obtained 67 per cent of the commercial property in the block where Adams Hall is located.

GET TO KNOW YOUR POLICEMEN

The monthly meetings with the Metropolitan Police officers who are assigned to Scout Car 80 and patrol your neighborhood 24 hours a day are held the third Monday of each month. Watch for notices at your apartment buildings.

These meetings are designed to enable the officers to get to know the people who live and/or work in their patrol area, and to discuss any police problems in that neighborhood.

WANTED: POSITIVE THINKERS (AND DOERS)

In recent months, two fine citizens of Foggy Bottom have passed on.

Mr. Burton Wilson is well remembered for his incisive comments and intelligent questions at FBA meetings, as well as his anti-apathy letters on pollution, waste, good citizenship, and the glories of Foggy Bottom.

Mr. Harry Collier, a long-time Foggy Bottom businessman and familiar face at the Oktoberfests, will be very much missed by the houses of worship where he did charitable work and especially by a fifteen-year-old girl, who, having no father, "adopted" him and performed small tasks at the Tiffany Valet to pay for her dry-cleaning.

These two pairs of shoes will be difficult to fill, but we certainly hope someone is willing to try.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mr. Dennis R. Williams, President
Foggy Bottom Association

Dear Mr. Williams:

This is in reply to your February 1st letter wherein you request the removal of the newly installed high intensity sodium vapor lights on the freeway adjacent to the Kennedy Center, which were placed there at the request of the Inaugural Officials as a security measure during the Inaugural festivities.

Since then, the Department has received similar requests from several other residents of the area and I am pleased to inform you that upon our surveillance of the situation, we have decided to replace the lights with lesser intensities similar to those which were originally installed. As a matter of fact, my Street Lighting Staff has already initiated the necessary work and issued orders to the Potomac Electric Power Company to implement the change.

It would be greatly appreciated if you would make this information available to the members of your Association.

Sincerely yours,

T. F. Airis, Director
Dept. of Highways and Traffic

FEBRUARY FBA MEETING

Officials of METRO addressed the FBA meeting on February 26. "More like a magic carpet than a subway," were the words used by John Druckenbrod, METRO's Assistant Director of Community Services, to describe Washington's subway, now in the noisy construction stage in the Foggy Bottom area. METRO is trying to move ahead on schedule, but is trying to do something about citizen complaints, Mr. Druckenbrod explained. The average guy, he said, comes home from work after a hard day and he's in no mood to listen to METRO construction all night. If you have a complaint about METRO construction noise, call Mr. Dana Wallace at the D.C. Department of Highways and Traffic.

In addition to Mr. Druckenbrod, Mr. Waram and Arthur Minwegen also attended the FBA meeting. They are engineers with Bechtel Associates, General Construction Consultants to METRO. The men showed slides to illustrate what the new subway system will look like when it is finished, and to show how construction is proceeding.

You will be able to ride from the Foggy Bottom station to the House side of the Capitol in eight minutes, and you will never have to wait more than three minutes for a train during rush hours. There will be discount fares for senior citizens during non-rush hours. Eighteen and a half miles and 24 stations are now under construction in the metropolitan area, representing 19 percent of the total system's mileage. The entire system is due for completion in 1979, but in May 1976, initial service in the Foggy Bottom area will begin.

Other highlights of the FBA meeting included a demonstration by a police officer of Operation Identification, the Police Department's effort to have Washington residents identify their belongings by marking them with an electric engraver. Information is available from the precinct which will lend the marker to persons wishing to engrave their social security number or other identifying mark on their possessions. The idea is that possessions so marked are easier to recover if stolen.

Mark Plaisted, Foggy Bottom's representative on the D.C. Bicentennial Commission, made a brief report and asked FBA residents with ideas for neighborhood bicentennial projects to let him know so that he can present them to the Commission for possible funding.

The meeting adjourned at 10:15 p.m.

HAS YOUR RENT BEEN INCREASED MORE THAN 6%

When the price freeze was lifted some landlords increased rents in excess of the announced guidelines. A number of organizations are now collecting information to determine what action should be taken to roll back excessive rent increases. (Montgomery County, for example, just passed Rent Control Legislation.)

Please contact the following if your rent was increased by more than 6%.

IN SYMPATHY

We extend our sympathy to Dr. Forest K. Harris and his family, of 800 New Hampshire Ave., N.W., on the recent death of his wife Carol.

A native of Mahanoy City, Penna., Mrs. Harris came to the Washington area in 1949 and worked as a receptionist and laboratory technician in the offices of several medical doctors here, including her husband's.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two daughters, her father and three sisters. The Harrises have lived in Foggy Bottom for more than 15 years.

American housewives enjoy trying innovations in cooking — partly to avoid monotony and partly to spring something new on their friends. Many of these are too "cute" but sometimes an idea comes along that fits the modern woman's requirements of being easy, quick and really good tasting.

At a recent dinner party in McLean our old friend Doris Jones presented two variations on standard toppings — one on the casserole and one on the dessert.

Cocktails
Hors d'oeuvre
Stuffed Pork Chops
*Broccoli casserole
Grapefruit, avocado salad
*Parfait
Coffee

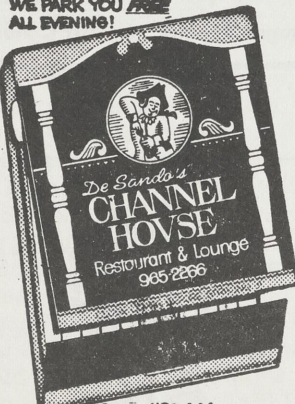

*Broccoli casserole

Cook two boxes of frozen, chopped broccoli and drain well. While still hot mix in one large package of Philadelphia cream cheese. While the broccoli is cooking toss one half package of Pepperidge Farms bread stuffing in one quarter cup of butter. Put the broccoli, cheese mixture in a buttered casserole and sprinkle the buttered crumbs over the top. Bake thirty minutes to heat thoroughly.

*Heath Bar Parfait

Fill parfait glasses three fourths full of chocolate ice cream. Pour one ounce of Creme de Cocoa over the ice cream. Sprinkle broken pieces of Heath Bar over the top. These may be prepared ahead and put in the freezer until ready to serve.

Diehl said GW owned six pieces of land in that block, but "could not compete" with a "massive international organization such as the IMF." As a result, GW lost the block, after presenting several arguments before the NCPC, and had to redesign the plan once again.

The present GW Master Plan, drawn by Marcou, O'Leary and Associates, Inc., of Washington, resulted in a three phase development program of the 19 block area designated by the NCPC in which GW presently owns 76 per cent of the land.

According to Diehl, GW has no power of eminent domain, which forces the University to purchase all land on the open market when the owner is willing to sell.

Elliott said, "The owner can wait for the price he wants, but several owners themselves become invested in the development of GW and give their property to GW."

The only block within the designated area where GW does not own property is bounded by Virginia Ave., and 23rd and G Streets. Elliott and Diehl expressed some concern about the area and hope a situation similar to the one with IMF did not occur there.

"The whole thing rests on the University's support in the area of development from all segments of its community-alumni, faculty, students, etc.," Elliott said. "It is my feeling that by allowing GW to develop we will be adding to the unanimity of this area, not detracting from it."
